

HISTORY

Brian Boru was born near Killaloe in County Clare. He was the son of Lorecan, King of Thomond and brother of Mahon, who became King of Munster following their father's death in 951. His brother was killed by Norsemen in the year 976, and Brian avenged his brother's death by killing the Norse King Imar. Brian Boru became recognized as the High King of All Ireland, a recognition never before given to a High King.

Brian Boru was killed on Good Friday by Norsemen in the great Battle of Clontarf in 1014.

This restaurant is named after Brian Boru in recognition of the great leadership he gave the people of Ireland during this period.

MISSION

Our mission is to bring truly Irish hospitality to the communities in which we operate. Be authentically Irish in every sense and create a memorable experience in food, beverage and service that our customers will always want to come back for.

FOOD

If this is your first time here, try our famous Fish and Chips, legendary Corned Beef Reuben, one-of-a-kind Shepherd's Pie, or speak with any of our friendly team members and ask for recommendations on daily specials. Our Chef Preston Gunther takes great pride in recreating our original Irish recipes for Irish favorites and takes special care in creating exciting specials with an Irish influence. Wherever possible we will introduce local produce during the season to enhance our specials and keep them local!

AMBIANCE

Brian Boru was opened in 2007 and is situated in a newer type of building than our sister restaurants, Galway Bay in Annapolis and Killarney House in Davidsonville. Prior to opening, we worked with the Irish Pub Company on the authentic design of a modern day Irish pub. All of the furniture throughout the restaurant as well as the wood finishes were milled in Ireland and transported here for assembly including the Liscanner stone floor in the dining room. The bar counter was milled from recycled barn wood from an old farmhouse in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The stylish interiors were put together to create a comfortable surrounding to enjoy good company, great food and premium beverages.
